Cranbrook Charette: “Politics, Gender, Religion”

Poster designed in response to a prompt / charette assignment by Elliott Earls, after “Thoughts on Democracy” (exhibition at the Woolfsonian) prior to the 2008 Presidential Election.

This poster was a meditation on the role that gender and traditional Judeo-Christian expectations of gender roles were playing in the public discourse at a time when America is exporting Democracy to other nations.

The poster is ink-jet, hand-embellished with gold-stamp and scrapbooking Bumble Bee stickers.
